

As I understand it the FCC is considering passing a law to restrict telemarketing calls. I think that this is good however I do not feel that the FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections.

Indiana's privacy law has greatly reduced the time that I have to spend talking to telemarketers. This allows me more time to get things done and spend time with my family. I used to receive 2-4 calls a night and now I receive maybe 1 per week.

I feel that the state and local governments are better able to serve the citizens than the federal government. Therefore, I strongly disagree with the federal government superseding the states authority. I don't believe that the founders of this nation intended for the federal government to over rule states. Give the power to the states and let them decide what's best for me and my family. Please leave Indiana's No Call Rule alone!

Thank You for your time.
